Welcome to BFREPA LIVE 24: James Baxter

Last year's conference saw remarkable growth, with the Gala Dinner hosting over 650 producers and trade members.

We expanded the number of stands by thirteen, accommodating nearly one hundred companies to showcase their businesses. This growth underscores the need for early booking for future events.

Unfortunately, we still need space to ensure we don't have to turn companies away, so we will look at other ways to increase the number of exhibitors by 2025. The takeaway message is to book early.

I extend my heartfelt thanks to all the sponsors who have been instrumental in making this event a success. Your support has not only enabled BFREPA to organise such a prestigious event but also underscored the strength of our industry when we come together.

This is the second year Noble Foods has been the headline sponsor, and I would like to extend my sincere thanks for their support of this industry event. Newquip, Boehringer Ingelheim, ForFarmers, and Elanco, thank you for your continuing support.

We take our awards seriously, ensuring we reward those producers and companies in the free range sector who go above and beyond. We have free range producers who set the standard and raise the bar for all to aspire to. We have companies that supply quality products that help us maintain the standards and offer the support this industry relies on that helps us ensure that the free-range producers of tomorrow get the knowledge learned from the free range producers of today.

I hope everyone enjoys this conference and the Gala Dinner, and I look forward to seeing members old and new.

Welcome to BFREPA LIVE 24: Noble Foods

At Noble Foods, we are once again proud to support the BFREPA Conference - a cornerstone event for the British free-range egg industry and an essential gathering of minds committed to advancing our shared goals.

Today, we unite with a vision for British free-range egg production that champions resilience, innovation, and sustainability at every level. As we face ongoing challenges, from shifting consumer demands to environmental pressures, it is more critical than ever to work collaboratively. Together, we can build an industry that not only withstands these pressures but thrives within them, setting new standards for quality, animal welfare, and environmental stewardship.

This conference is a valuable opportunity to connect, share insights, and explore practical strategies that will carry us into the future. It is by exchanging our knowledge and experiences that we can continue to strengthen and expand our industry, ensuring that it is prepared to seize new opportunities and adapt to changing landscapes.

I look forward to engaging with each of you, learning from your unique perspectives, and contributing to discussions that will shape the future of free-range egg farming in the UK.

Thank you for being part of this event, and here's to an inspiring, collaborative, and productive day ahead.

Gary Ford

BFREPA PR & Policy

Gary Ford is Head of Strategy and Producer Engagement at BFREPA, having started in post in November 2024. Prior to taking up his new role, Gary was Chief Executive of the BEIC.

From a Worcestershire farming family, managing dairy, arable and pigs, Gary has spent his working life in the agricultural sector.

Starting his professional career at the NFU, he spent 19 years with the organisation covering a variety of roles, including Chief Poultry Adviser, supporting members through a range of issues.

Gary is passionate about poultry and supporting producers. Working closely with BFREPA members and helping them to succeed is one of his key priorities.

Patrick Lewis

Gamber Poultry Litter

Patrick Lewis is MD of Gamber which has been involved in the poultry litter business for the last 12 years buying and selling throughout the whole country. Gamber take the “hassle” out of managing grower’s litter arranging the transport and sales followed up with pay weights and full traceability. With the various proposed renewable projects being built within the UK over the next two years this will use a large proportion of broiler litter which Gamber hopes will leave a gap in the market for layer litter (provided it is dry enough).

Charles Macleod

St Davids Poultry Team

Charles spent over a decade managing pullet production at Humphreys, before joining St David’s Poultry Team as Commercial Manager Layers in 2022.

“Poultry Waste or Rocket Fuel”

The lead article in Arable Farmer over 20 years ago. Whilst the author concentrated on field spreading techniques it does highlight that the current situation is not about pollution and waste, but the distribution of a valuable element vital for human survival and food production that the UK does not have an indigenous supply of.

I will summarise the BFREPA sponsored Manure Survey and suggest interventions that could aid distribution of poultry manure to areas of nutrient deficit in the UK’s arable estate.

Nick Tilt

Free Range Egg Producer

Nick Tilt and his wife Louise supply Stonegate from their 200 ha base in the Welsh Marches. In addition to Hens they have a 10 year feedstock supply contract with a local anaerobic digester which currently takes all their litter along with maize, forage rye and grass.

Litter is collected every 5 days and loaded in a dedicated loading shed accessed via roller shutter doors. Whilst not in the Wye valley catchment area Nick is concerned that manure spreading restrictions will become more onerous, and is keen that the industry is seen to be proactive on the issue.

Professor Ashley C Banyard

Head of National Reference Laboratory (AI, Swine Influenza & Newcastle disease)

Ash currently leads a series of teams in a diverse range of activities from diagnostic frontline activities to innovative applied and 'blue-sky' research studies. His interest throughout his career has been viral pathogens of high consequence, with a particular interest in those that have zoonotic potential and/or that affect the poorest communities on the planet.

As well as the frontline diagnosis of notifiable animal influenza viruses and Newcastle disease Professor Banyard's workgroup is supported by active research programmes across a broad range of research areas. He represents APHA on a global level both through invitation to deliver keynote lectures at conferences and through reactive media work.

Dave Hodson

Rosehill Poultry

Dave Hodson is a technical specialist and part of the family that own Rosehill, who have worked in the area of poultry disease prevention since the advent of commercial poultry vaccines. During the Salmonella crisis David Hodson Snr. worked extensively with the first of the live vaccines, developing the most effective methods of administration and training the UK industry. Now Dave Hodson continues this, providing training and technical support to the UK laying sectors rearing companies and helping to educate on salmonella prevention in laying flocks.

Thomas Tiley

Elanco

Thomas Tiley's career in animal health began after graduating as a veterinarian from the University of Edinburgh. Further augmenting his qualifications with an MBA in 2012, he joined Elanco that year as Marketing Manager for the UK and Ireland. Demonstrating a strong strategic mindset, he advanced within Elanco, undertaking roles of increasing responsibility. His journey progressed from Global Account Manager for EMEA (2015) to leading Poultry Commercial Operations across EMEA (2018), ultimately leading to his appointment as Poultry Vaccines Senior Director International in 2022.

Lucy Asher

Professor of Behaviour Informatics, Newcastle University

Professor Asher uses mathematical and computational methods to understand animal behaviour and health, particularly in domestic chickens and dogs. For example, she has developed an automatic sensor detecting distress in chicks in commercial poultry farms leading to reduced mortality.

For the past five years Lucy has been working in close collaboration with the Lakes Free Range Egg Company and FAI on research into laying hen behaviour problems. This research has contributed to a better understanding of the enigmatic behaviour of piling which causes smothering and has identified new ways in which behaviour and welfare could be automatically detected.

Ben Chilman

Free Range Egg Producer

Like many young farmers, Ben Chilman is a busy chap. In a few short years since graduating from Harper Adams, he's forged a media career specialising in agri-environmental issues, launched a successful podcast series tackling the most sensitive subjects in farming and, in what spare time he has, taken the mic to commentate on National League North high-fliers, Hereford FC. Ben's story, and his ability to tell it, is impressive.

"Everybody's got a story to tell," says Ben. Perhaps they do, but few are as rich and as varied and told with as much infectious enthusiasm and genuine warmth. You're going to love listening to him at the Conference!

Noble Foods is proudly family-owned and the UK's leading egg producer, home to the nation's No.1 egg brands, the happy egg co. and Purely Organic. Partnering with over 200 family-run farms, Noble Foods ensures high animal welfare standards, offering support through a dedicated agricultural team from rearing and feed supply to bird processing.

As a vertically integrated business, Noble Foods provides its farmers with quality pullets, specialised hen rations from Noble Milling, expert agricultural support, and hen processing at the end of their productive life at its Gainsborough site. This end-to-end management ensures high standards throughout production.

In 2024, Noble Foods invested in a new manufacturing site to expand into new food sectors and offer innovative egg-based products. This growth brings more versatility to eggs across all meal occasions, creating new sales opportunities for farmers and increasing the accessibility of high-quality, high-welfare eggs across retail, foodservice, and wholesale markets.
